Siberian roebuck hunt
Kustanai/Kazakhstan 2024

The hunting area

Kustanai, the province in the north-west of Kazakhstan, is among the best hunting areas for the Siberian roebuck among experts. In accordance with our motto, we have successfully carried out a test trip to the Karabalyk - Kustanai region in 2014. The high expectations were fully met, and several hunters were able to sack bucks of over 1,100 g and pole lengths of 45 cm. Something to the region Kustanai, which borders the Russian Kurgan in the north. With a size of many thousands of square kilometers, this province is one of the largest in the Kazakh lowlands of the country. The terrain is flat and variedly structured. Extensive agricultural areas, meadows and forests characterize this landscape. The Siberian Roe Deer, which is very common here, feels well, is obvious. There is abundant sowing, the numerous scattered groves and forests provide sufficient protection and protection for the game. The hunting pressure is very low. The main species is the Siberian Roe deer, which by far exceeds the European cousins, both in body strength and in strength. The capitals of the roebuck have depanned venison weights, which can surpass 45 kg and even 50 kg. Until the end of the 1980s, the Siberian Roe deer was known to only a few foreign hunters. And it could only be hunted in Mongolia at that time. It was not until the fall of the USSR and the founding of independent countries that we were offered a whole host of new possibilities for this interesting game. In addition to the well-known hunts in the Kurgan, Kustanai has become more and more important in recent years, due to the introduction of many world class trophies. The hunt for the Siberian roe deer in Kurgan has long been a proven standard program for our company.

The Siberian Roebuck:

There is hardly a more impressive trophy than that of a mature and capitalistic Siberian roebuck. With a pole length of up to 45 cm, he himself surpasses the capitals from Hungary, southern Germany or Sweden. Characteristic for the Siberian roebuck are the long and strong main poles with partly enormous circumference, the pronounced roses and a sometimes strong pearls. In contrast to our domestic roe deer, the „Siberian“ tends to the joy of the end. Eights, tens or even twelve are not uncommon. In 2014, one of our inns was able to score an odd 12 finish. The capital of Siberian reefs is said to have a horn weight of 1,000g. World class trophies are even more important. Weighing weights of over 1,400 g are documented. This shows that in no other region of Kazakhstan are stronger deer blocks than in the Kustanai, comparable to these capital deer blocks only with those from the Kurgan.

For hunting:

Best hunting season is from mid-August to early September. Then the rut time and the roe deer are very active to look for the rutting roe deer. In contrast to our domestic roe deer and due to the size of the individual districts one does not know in this region the patient sitting on a high seat. There is a lot of stalking and because you have to travel immense distances between the different parts of the area, much is also driven by the off-road vehicle. However, the successes of the Kazakh gamekeepers are right. By car you are able to reach even the most remote areas and then stalk at the most promising places on the capital. Hunting is predominant in the early morning and evening hours. During the time of the rut, of course, a hunt for the „sloth“ is also announced. Who understands the art of leafing, should try it. It is true that only a few Kazakhs know the hunting of the hunt, but the many successes of European guest hunters are one more and more pleasure in this type of hunting. In the Kustanai hunting in two hunting intervals. Once as described at the beginning of the leaf period from the end of August to the beginning of September and then in the autumn.

From October you have good chances. At this time, most of the fields are harvested and the deer is retreating into the surrounding forests and groves. It focuses on its well-known winter season. Numerous guest-hunters have been able to succumb to many of the capital during the autumn hunts. The now numerous abundant moose are unfortunately not yet huntable. But on Wolf and Keiler you can hunt as well. The wolf population is high and in the last year a total of 15 wolfs during the season could be killed by guests. Our hunting areas are located in the Karabalyk region, 200 km northwest of the city Kustanai and can be reached in a two to three-hour drive. In order to ensure the success of our hunts, our Kazakh organizer invests a lot of money and time in the training of the stalkers. Because of the terrain, we often have to shoot at long distances, we recommend caliber with a stretched trajectory in the middle to upper performance range. Cartridges, e.g. The 6.5 x 68, .270 Win. Or also the different calibers of the .300 group or similar are ideal for hunting. A good binoculars with 8- or 10-times magnification should be there and for the exact response also a spotting scope.

The accommodation:

During your stay you will stay in a hunting camp or a hunting lodge. The hunting lodges are generally well developed and offer comfortable beds, toilets, shower and a banja, the typical Russian sauna. The hunting camps are somewhat less luxurious, they consist of mobile cars and classic Mongolian yurts. A community tent where the meals are taken is the center of the camp. Simple washing facilities, shower and toilet are outside, as well as a simple Banja. Diesel generators provide the necessary electricity and cozy is such an accommodation as well. The cooks know how to bring tasty and hearty Kazakh dishes to the table.
